Rock Climbing and Bouldering Risks and Hazards

There are risks and hazards inherent to rock climbing and bouldering. The same elements that contribute to the uniqueness and fun of climbing and bouldering such as the physical effort or being in the outdoors can cause loss or damage to equipment, injury, illness, or in extreme cases, permanent trauma or death. OUTDOOR ADVENTURES does not want to heighten or reduce your enthusiasm for the experience, but we do want you to know in advance what to expect and to be informed of some of the possible risks. During this trip, participants may also have the opportunity to participate in optional activities. The following list does not intend to be all-inclusive; exclusion of a risk or hazard does not negate its possibility.

Injury or death while traveling to and from the activity sites.

Equipment failure or malfunction.

Rope burns while handling the rope.

Falling to the ground from a height of varying distance.

During a fall when roped up, the jolt from the rope catching you may injure you.

Objects falling off the climbing site may hit you, such as branches, climbing equipment, rocks and even other people.

Anchors may fail.

Belayer error.

Sunburn.

Heat and/or cold related illnesses.

Weather such as sun, cold, rain, lightening, hail, wind.

Dehydration.

Aspiration of water or drowning while swimming.

Bite or attack by an animal, reptile or insect.

Poisonous plants.

Slipping and falling while on the trail to the climbing site.

Camping requires sleeping outdoors whether with or without a tent, meals prepared over stoves and/or open fires and following appropriate camping hygiene and sanitation practices.

Personal injury including but not limited to: blisters; sprains, strains, dislocations, torn muscles and/or ligaments; fractured or broken bones; eye damage; cuts, wounds, scrapes, abrasions and/or contusions; head, neck, and/or spinal injuries; medical illnesses; allergic reaction, shock, paralysis or death.
